SYNOPSIS

A life-long farmer reaches the day he is forced to sell his last animal.

Emilio, a lonely man in his 80's, lives alone on his abandoned farm in the portuguese countryside. Everyone close is gone. One ram is all there is left. Due to physical incapacity and age, he decides to get rid of it. After the company who was supposed to buy the ram cancels the appointment, Emilio tries to sell it on his own. During this endeavour he is confronted with challenges that show how outdated he has become in today's world.

DIRECTOR'S NOTES

I was born in Germany but my family is Portuguese. I remember spending every summer with my grandparents, who were farmers living in a small village in the Portuguese countryside.

I remember playing in the main square with other kids, people cultivating the land, and animals being everywhere—today there is void and solitude. Like our family, many others turned their back on life on the fields and left for cities across Europe where the future seemed more promising.

The village that once had hundreds of habitants nowadays is reduced to a few dozens of elderly farmers left to themselves.

Emilio, the protagonist of this story, lives in a place he doesn't recognize anymore. What once was a lively animal farm he proudly owned, now is vanishing behind cracking walls and overgrown grass. He witnesses the creation of his lifetime being belittled by humans and slowly reclaimed by nature.
